Peddler and Merchant.

The next time a traveling peddler calls at your door and tries to sell goods, ask him if he will take your butter, eggs and other farm produce; ask him if when your neighborhood gets ready to build a road or bridge over a slough, he will willingly donate a few dollars to help it along. Tell him that there is a poor widow down the road who would be very thankful if he would donate a few provisions; ask him if he would contribute to an enterprise just starting. If he agrees to do this, then patronize him. Your home merchants do this and more.—Ex.

The County Editor.

Verily the life of a country editor is not all roses.

He sendeth the paper to a subscriber on credit and the subscriber payeth him not.

Then he stoppeth the delinquent's paper and the delinquent singeth tralal and borroweth it of a neighbor.

He whoopeth up the township politician and the politician gets elected and knoweth him no more.

He puffeth the church fair gratis and then attendeth it and payeth his quarter and receiveth two oysters.

He boometh the town and all things therein, and yet receiveth not the support he should.

Two young people marry and he giveth them a great puff, and they go to housekeeping and taketh not his paper.

Yes, he is bound down with woe and his days are full of grief and trouble and vexation of spirit.

If he sayeth a kind word he receiveth no praise, but if he publisheth an article that some one taketh offense at, woe is he.
